SPOTLIGHT: Community Responds to the Zika Outbreak

Miami is ground zero for the recent outbreak of Zika, a mosquito-borne virus that can be transmitted sexually. This is especially alarming in light of Florida's efforts to defund Planned Parenthood and restrict abortion access. Planned Parenthood of South, East and North Florida has undertaken a major public education campaign, canvassing in medically underserved neighborhoods to engage community members who speak English, Spanish, and Creole and encourage them to connect with their neighbors and local businesses. Since 2015, Planned Parenthood has educated nearly 36,000 residents about the risks posed by Zika and distributed 135 Zika prevention kits that include condoms and dental dams.
