SPOTLIGHT: Justice in Housing for LGBTQ People

Oklahoma City took an important step in protecting residents' access to fair housing in 2016 by updating its housing nondiscrimination ordinance to add familial status, disability, age, sexual orientation, and gender identity to the list of protected classes. The protections for LGBTQ people, in particular, were hotly contested and passed by only a slim 5-4 margin in the Oklahoma City Council. Oklahoma City's mayor declared this a victory that demonstrated that Oklahoma City was opposed to discrimination in all forms.
