SPOTLIGHT: United for Insurance Coverage of Abortion

The Philadelphia Board of Health became the first local Board of Health to demonstrate its support for comprehensive coverage of abortion care in 2013 by unanimously passing a resolution calling for repeal of the federal Hyde Amendment. The Philadelphia City Council built on that momentum three years later, passing a similar resolution condemning 40 years of the federal ban on abortion coverage and calling for passage of the EACH Woman Act. The 2016 resolution was an important response to a state ban on insurance coverage of abortion passed in late 2013. Philadelphia is now one of only two cities that have passed multiple resolutions demonstrating a commitment to abortion coverage.
